The Topic The Ancient Wisdom of Ontario Masons

Ancient Wisdom from times immemorial has flowed down to us - sometimes as a mighty river and sometimes by underground streams. To preserve the knowledge of an ancient priesthood some of it was enshrined in building works and became part of the traditions of operative masons. By studying these works scholars picked up on some of this ancient wisdom, they became speculative masons. Some of these speculative masons became architects. They designed new buildings, new cities, that reflected these ancient values. The builders of these works, operative masons, again preserved these values for the future. We will explore how these streams sometimes separated and sometimes flowed into one another.
